

Their findings highlight headwaters as vital for the microbial biodiversity in entire fluvial networks. These findings are critical given the numerous ecosystem functions microbes fulfil and the fact that headwater are increasingly under threat worldwide. Their findings were published in the Proceedings of the Royal Society B.