Figures in English

Figure 1: Life cycle of insects exemplified with the caddisfly. The eggs are laid into the water by the adult caddisfly. In the water, the larvae develop and grow sometimes several years until they develop the pupa. The adult caddisfly emerges from the pupa and reproduces on land until they lay their eggs again.

Figure 2: Caddisflies in Upper Seebach in Lunz am See. You can see moving needles or stones in the water that the caddisflies used to build their caddis with.
